BIOGRAFICAL INFORMATION

Dr. John Ellis van Courtland Moon (1929- ) is a historian and was a professor at Fitchburg State College. Born in Geneva, Switzerland, Dr. Moon graduated from St. Mark’s School, Southborough, Massachusetts in 1948. He received his A.B. from Harvard College (History and Literature) in 1952; his M.A. from Columbia University (English and Comparative Literature) in 1953; his Ph.D from Harvard University (American Civilization) in 1968.

He was a teaching fellow at Harvard University and taught at Merrimack College, Boston University, Boston State College, and Fitchburg State College. He began his tenure at FSC in 1982 in the History department and retired in 1993. In 1994, he spent a year in England researching the history of chemical warfare under several grants while participating in the War Studies seminars at King’s College, University of London. His research areas include American and Far Eastern history with a specific focus on military history, terrorism, chemical and biological weapons, and ethical norms in war.

In addition to his scholarly work, Dr. Moon was actively engaged in leadership roles within his profession, including serving as president of the Boston State College faculty, the Massachusetts State College Association and twice as president of the Massachusetts Conference of the American Association of University Professors. He was a charter member of the Research Advisory Council of the Chemical and Biological Arms Control Institute, on Harvard’s former Chemical-Biological Warfare Working Group at the Kennedy School of Government, and member of the Chemical Warfare Group of the American Federation of Scientists. In 1985 he testified as an expert witness in front of the President’s Chemical Warfare Review Commission. He serves on the Senior Editorial Board of the Applied Science and Analysis Review, and the Harvard University International Security Seminar, In 2005, he became a charter member of the Biosecurity Seminar at MIT.
SCOPE AND CONTENT NOTE

The collection contains papers related to Dr. Moon’s research and writing as well as his activities in faculty leadership. Records related to his research on education, military history and policy, and the history of chemical and biological warfare include research notes, drafts, reprints and copies of published material, speeches, and editorial correspondence.
